ENGLISH AND FOREIGN AFFAIRS
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

[illegible]

As if, however, her hands were not sufficiently full, she then finds grave reason for believing that France is contemplating a movement in another quarter of the East. There is at present in Paris an embassy from the Kingdom of Burmah, which has already visited Milan, Genoa, Venice, and other parts of Europe. The ostensible object of this mission is to enter into commercial treaties with England, France, and other countries in Europe, but the real meaning of their visit is that King Thebaw is seeking to play off French as against English influence in his kingdom. Of course it is quite possible that his cupiditary aims may be frustrated by the success of the Irrawaddy Fluvial Company, and that the monarch may be obliged to close on the trade in raw wood, and perhaps even to take steps to develop the rubber industry.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 24.

The imposing ceremonial witnessed in connection with the obsequies of the Archbishop of Sydney on Thursday, August 23, in the charming church attached to the residence of the Archbishop, was a most impressive and touching scene. The Archbishop's body was lying in state in the church, and the funeral service was conducted by the Archbishop of Liverpool, who was assisted by the Bishop of Manchester and the Bishop of London. The service was attended by a large number of clergy and laymen, and the Archbishop's body was interred in the vault of the Archbishop of Liverpool.

The whole strength of the State would be employed in this matter against the Catholics, who would be left to themselves to obtain that which Archbishop Vaughan prided himself on obtaining Sydney. It was always his desire to see Catholic schools free from what he called State control.

THE MEETING OF THE EMPERORS.

The Vienna journals publish long accounts concerning the Emperor's visit to the Emperor of Germany at Garmisch, near the Ebnesees station, where the Emperor Francis Joseph was awaiting him, accompanied by ambassador, Prince Louis, Count Wessely, General von Bismarck, and the Emperor's personal physician. The Emperor of Germany wore the uniform of a colonel of Austrian regiment and the grand collar of the Order of St. Stephen. The meeting was most cordial, and the Emperor of Germany, after having arrived at the station, was received by the Empress Elizabeth, who had given the station a company by the Master of the Household, and the Emperor of Germany, after having arrived at the station, was received by the Empress Elizabeth, who had given the station a company by the Master of the Household, and the Emperor of Germany, after having arrived at the station, was received by the Empress Elizabeth, who had given the station a company by the Master of the Household.

The Queen has granted a pension of £350 a year to the Civil List to Mr. Matthew Arnold, in recognition of distinguished literary attainments and of his eminence as a poet.

The correspondent of the Standard in Madagascar writes to be especially pleased with his labours in that country when he reads in the Tropic that the French Government, by following his accurately described line of march, have no more difficulty in reaching Antananarivo than had. His careful account of the Bova any, too, will, expected, make the task of crushing it a very easy one.

A terrible tornado broke over the south-eastern part of Michigan on August 2. At Rochester 40 persons were ported to have been killed and 60 injured. A third livestock is stated to be wrecked, and it is feared that whole country around that town is in ruins. The number of persons who have been killed and injured is not known on the floodplain and Northern railway was blown off line, and it is reported that 25 passengers were killed and injured.

Mr. Roger O'Brien writes "Anglo Australian" in the Evening Mail has lately appeared in quite a novel light. While opposition among the believers in his nobility has been increasing, the same has been the case with Arthur Orton, the Claimant has himself taken up a attitude, and posing as a persecuted Protestant, he has produced a number of articles in the Evening Mail in defence of his cause, and has also written a book on the subject, "The Orton Conspiracy." He accordingly declares his object to be a thorough Protestant, although admitting (he objects to the word confession) that he has only once been a Catholic, and that he is now a Protestant, and that he is contained in a letter addressed to Mr. Quartermaster L. and "St. Roger" winds up by stating that he never has been a Catholic, and that he is now a Protestant.

and it is not necessary for the protection of public that they should have it, and it would be in the great dangerous state of affairs said to be," and they, he believed, would not allow it. The process was "unridicled, unaltained power," or even exceptional cases such as Members of Parliament exercised when at their places they criticised persons outside; or privileges as learned advocates in courts of justice held. But was no sought was, he believed, that the laws relating to might be so amended, that while every precaution taken that the name, honour, and character of the individual would be shielded from being unjustly unnecessarily assailed, yet the right to comment on men or institutions should be granted to every man, who, in the courts of justice he was able to satisfy judge and jury that the comment or stricture was made in spite, without malice, for the public good, and with regard to the truth of the matter. This privilege, which they thought under proper restrictions should be granted to every man, would give to the public press a guarantee that in the faithful performance of their public duties they need not be hampered by the mere speculative actions of the press. The law would not be so inefficient to protect that the law would be made honestly, without malice, and for the benefit of the public. It was important that the writer should to prove in a court of justice that every one of his ments or strictures was true, and should be fall the of the costs, with whatever damages might be awarded, the price of exposing perhaps an outrageous fraud on public. The Anderson v. Fairfax case was an illustra-of what might happen to the press should it under the at law honestly attempt to place before the public the character of a public institution. The service thus Herald rendered was best expressed in the s of two of the Judges who heard the appeal. ances Martin said:—"I am not now dealing with the s of the case, but I have no hesitation in expressing pinion that in the publication of this report, and the which defendants took for the purpose of making inquiries, they not only discharged a public duty, but rendered a great public service. I say that although a report of this nature is not the motive for which the defendants acted, and the trustworthiness of public by the steps they took in investigating the working of this institution. Further, in reference to the gentleman sent there, whom I met, and with whom I have had intercourse in the of taking notes at commissions, I have no objection in expressing my opinion that it would be of great utility to find a more competent and trustworthy person than Mr. Lyne. Not only did the defendants discharge a by duty by making these inquiries, but they sent as sistent and reliable a person as could be selected from own or any other staff to discharge that duty." Judge Faurett said:—"I may add also, in reference to the case, as had been stated by His Honor, that, so far as I Judge without having read the greater portion of the ence, my opinion is also that a great public benefit conferred in all probability by the publication of this and, although I am not prepared to say that the ages were too high, it may be that I think they were."

they had no Judges declaring to the contrary that second of the two cases, that the first was a benefit, and had of the unscrupulous and profligate aristocracy, and not for doing this and exposing what they truthfully perceived to be a fraud, they were compelled to contribute thousands of pounds in costs and damages. They were told they had a paper so honest and straightforward, and they showed their gratitude to that paper and the generally by saying that not only the Herald but all papers in the colony whilst trying honestly to do their duty to the public should be protected if endeavouring to do duty without malice, but for the public benefit, and a duty regard to truth. He had not read that the press was thought "unbridled, unlimited power;" it was argued that they had a public duty to perform, and in it the laws of the land deaf hardly them. The people wished to give them license but freedom to perform their work, provided it was done honestly and trustfully. At the same time that liberty was granted, there should be every safeguard every precaution taken to protect the people, the law, and the laws of the land. He thought that the South Wales might be safely entrusted with such a law as it was proposed to give it. Whilst not desiring to any exception to the interpretation of the law by their jurers, or question their purity of motive, still from their protection of it the people felt that the law was injurious to the best interests of the community, and whilst acknowit to be the law at present, they would strain every nerve for its adjustment on the basis of equity and justice to those who had a public duty to perform. (Applause.) I trusted that no such penalties as had been imposed in England would ever be imposed again. He was following the steps of the Chief Justice as regarded the injurious use of the libel. His Honor Mr. Justice Faneau was of the same opinion. It was to be hoped that those who followed him would show clearly that not only should the law be amended, so as to define the duties the press owed the public, but should also prevent what the Attorney-General had described as speculative actions against wealthy

It was not necessary to put any more delay upon by every party that it ought to be done, and not cause any delay and on behalf of the people it was to be dragged through this difficulty and what would their thoughts have been if the press had heard what it heard concerning this institution, and had heard it from some other source? (Hear, hear.) press had a duty to do to the public, and the public see that in performing that duty it had all needful power and privilege, without at the same time having power licentious. (Cheers.)

A. DODD seconded the resolution. He was glad to hear that this matter had been very nearly settled by an which had been given to a deputation by the Coloretary, who had stated that it should have the sanction of the Government at a very early period, and no doubt an amendment in the law would be made. The resident of the North Shore must be familiar with the circumstances of this case. The Chief Justice, he said, had paid a high compliment to the Herald, and also to the gentleman sent out for this particular purpose, when he said that they were the only two for that night who were not particularly to thank for an amendment of the law. He would like him to be hard that a newspaper, having been asked to send a reporter to a place and give a truthful account of what he saw, should be called upon to give heavy er for publishing its report of a place which, in a er, was a public one. They must all esteem highly the value of a free press. If they not have such a press, the abuses which exist would become intolerable. It would be a loss community if such abuses existed without being to exposure. If the law were amended he did not there would be any fear of its being abused. Mr. y, the Attorney-General, had said: "The duty is upon the Government of clearly defining the limits which the greatest organ of human civilization in times must operate for the enlightenment of society.

eliminating the part to which these may be applied, and animated by the best intentions, may be led into the discharge of public duties, the highest instances. It is not that proposals are to be made for facilitating injury to private characters, for libel and defamation are not giving to a newspaper printer a license to deprive a citizen of his property, or to exercise freedom to discuss even public matters in a vicious spirit. This would be to inflict upon society a wrong if possible than to limit the freedom of fair and honorable comment. The gentlest, the most retiring, and the most unassuming of mankind would suffer from such legislation. But I need hardly tell you that no attempt of this kind will be made, and I do not think that any such cept was ever contemplated, or that the idea of such ever occupied the mind of any reasonable being.

that will be undertaken is to provide, on the one that the press shall be protected in the discussion tions of public interest, whether affecting political the management of institutions appealing for public rt and confidence, the administration of public justice, other matter on which deep and universal interests

In the Herald were true, and to many Goulbourn they would be especially so, after the conduct of Mrs. Goulbourn when collecting recently in Goulbourn. The argument also collected the statements, in that they had the Andersens from the land. He did not agree to remarks in the Echo in reference to the Judges. Goulbourn was a scholar of his, and he knew that he was a lover of truth and a man of great as a lawyer. The matter lay thus at present: newspaper made six charges, and only proved five, it cost in heavy damages as well as costs, and any one in common sense, even those who have nothing in them in such an action. The resolution was put and carried.

and no resolution, which was also similar to that at the Sydney meeting, was moved by Mr. Gao, and seconded by Mr. A. J. O'Connell. Mr. Mayne moved the third resolution, the terms of which were likewise similar in effect to that passed at the meeting in Sydney. He said that as the motion virtually had the power to pronounce the people as dangerous to the State, in Parliament, years ago, he had tabled a bill to the effect of libel. Mr. Justice Waddell, then Attorney-General, had obtained a count-out on that particular point, and Mr. Mayne said that Sir H. Parkes had also apologized to him for the action of a member of the Government. He (the Mayne) desired, in that bill, to state and amend the many Acts at present relating to and he made the provisions of the measure suitable to the present condition of the country, holding these meetings over the country was apparent. The meeting was seconded by Mr. J. OLIVER, and carried unanimously.

He then moved that a memorial embodying the effect of the resolutions be prepared for presentation to Parliament, and also carried.

He of thanks to the Mayor concluded the proceedings. In response, in responding, and he was satisfied that his opinion might exist as to the success of the cause, he was going to his long experience, that the friends of the people were the friends of liberty, and they had no more to say than any other part of the colony to see the cause of the press curtailed in any way.

Weekly meeting of the Finance Committee of the Council was held yesterday afternoon, the Mayor being absent, and the following aldermen present:—Hart, Kippax, J. D. Young, Poole, Boare, Lee, Withers, Taylor, Meeks, Palmer, Chapman, Parker, Jones, Fowler, Butler, O'Connor, and Playfair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The financial statement for the ending 3rd October, 1883, was as follows:—City fund, £r. 289, 10s. 6d.; Poor fund, £r. 12, 5s. 4d.; £193, 15s. 10d.; £1,232 12s. 10d. Common fund, £r. 1,043 4s. 11d.; cattle sale-

Government mortgage fund, retired by Government and due to city, or 275,000 fr.; sinking fund, cattle mairiads, or 3d.; sinking fund, cattle mairiads, invested, or 3d.; sinking fund, cattle mairiads, invested, or 3d.; Town Hall loan, 420,000 fr., £2017 sink balance, 147,270 fr. 8d., or 448,669 fr. 10d. The accounts were passed for payment.

emphasizing that the men who supervised the street crossings did not give any notice (the petitioners said they waited for ponies and drivers) when they were crossing the streets. They be council to make the men stand on the crossing, to remind omnibus drivers and others to walk over the crossing.

Mr. LERS moved, "That the sum of £20,000 be from the present current balance of the water fund, voted to the best advantage for a fixed period." Motion was carried.

My second objection on the letter of the Colonial Secretary, desiring to be furnished with an outline of the works for which the council required or proposed of the sum of £500,000, desired to be borrowed by was requested. "That the Colonial Secretary be empowered, "That the Colonial Secretary be empowered, to bring in a bill to enable the Council to £600,000, for the purpose of laying down permanent and other public works of a reproductive character." Finally persuaded that if they had no good pavements in the principal streets of the city, it is not possible to have a productive work, and one on which the loan could be wisely expended. He believed a good pavement put down with a life of 21 years, also the foundation of the streets would be kept in good repair, so that if they could get the £600,000 to lay out in good streets which did not need constant repairs, it was the effect of reducing the citizens' rates. He they should put their shoulders to the wheel and money in a systematic way, and one likely to be most reproductive. From the indications of the money market, they would be able to soon get money. What they wanted was to put the streets of the city in good condition. He did not think that the streets of the city were in good condition. The streets of the city were to be thus re-constructed, but only the streets of the city, no matter to what ward they belong.

MAN PARKER thought that attention should be paid to footpaths.

MAN DEAN agreed with Alderman Batcher. He thought that what was intended was to make permanent the main arteries of the city. He believed that it was a saving to the Government to have a bill to borrow the money, as it would by a vote of ultimately great saving. James Taylor thought that some portion of the night wall be expended in the erection of new streets. The present markets in Devon were a disgrace to the city. He thought that if they got the site of the court added to the present market site, and room good markets; or even if they erected them, it would be a wise expenditure of money. The building of the conference hall, by the Mayor, and it was allowed to be expeditious.

Some further discussion, the motion was carried, and resolved that the city architect should be employed to call for tenders for a town hall, &c.

The report was read from the city engineer, with reference to the late explosion of gas in the sewer from Devon.

manded his orders had not been carried out. Master J. D. Youve complained of the negligence of the men and the disobedience of the orders, and Master Mr. Mountain he suspended pending an inquiry master.

Mountain was called in, and explained that on the following the day of the meeting, leaving that the men and expressed his desire that the matter should be, he informed Mr. Lee, clerk of works, of that and that officer informed him that the work was completed.

Master J. D. Youve still held that some inquiry was made into the matter, and whoever was to blame.

Mountain explained how the matter stood, and

OFFICIAL LIGHT.—At the Parkes Museum house, Margaret-street, Regent-street, Captain Galton lectured recently upon "Recent Improvements in Artificial Lighting, and their Bearing upon the Air in rooms." A large gathering of persons was present, which was presided over by Sir Joseph Fawcett. In his lecture, Captain Galton remarked that the improvements which had taken place in the production of light in the last year had improved it with but a trifling extent upon the hygienic aspect of the same. It was extremely desirable to bring the subject produced a great quantity of light. The next day, however, the electric current was employed to heat iron so as to make it incandescent, and thus use it as a source of light. He remarked in conclusion that the light would probably supersede all others, but it was probable that the great advance which had been made in the production of light by means of gas might enable that material to hold its own for some time longer. —Times.
